Become a Museum Docent

- Do you love talking about airplanes?
- Do you have a passion for space travel?
- Do you love learning?

Being a Docent might be the position for you! The Museum of Flight is looking for people who are excited to engage with the public and share what they know about aviation and aerospace history.

Don't know anything about planes?

Don't worry! Museum Docents receive extensive training on our exhibits and have plenty of resources to learn more.

What are the benefits?

Volunteers earn perks at the Museum including free admission passes and discounts, while building a community of friends and inspiring people of all ages with the amazing stories of aviation and aerospace.

What is a Docent?
 A Docent is a subject expert who dedicates their time to the Museum. They guide visitors on captivating tours and provide answers to their questions, ranging from the location of the nearest restroom to what makes the Blackbird so cool.
